INFORMATION

In 2011, experimenting with the Mutoh ET SOS Scriber was an inspiring part of my thesis work, supported by Prof. Frank Philippin. The device was generously provided by Konrad Riegel-whose parents, both architects, had used it in the early 1990s. I began exploring its potential by replacing the usual Rapidograph with a brush pen, selecting DIN as a basis to start generating letterforms.

DIN Brush features two OpenType stylistic sets-Pixel Brush and Messy Brush-each available in three weights. It's an intentionally informal typeface, with many glyphs omitted by design. Due to its playful and incomplete nature, it is best suited for display use at larger sizes, such as headlines or short text blocks, rather than extended body copy. Building on this experimentation, I developed two additional typefaces using the Scriber: Vario Rounded and Muto. With the completion of Muto, this trilogy of Mutoh Fonts came to a close.

DESIGN

DIN Brush is designed by Rade Matic, two thousand and eleven.
